

World Book Day

A day of reading at Larkspur Books

LARKSPUR BOOKS

Start the Day with a Story

*W*orld Book Day begins with a story, and we would be glad to share one with you. Step in from the street, settle among the shelves, and let us read aloud for a little while. Our morning readings are for the regular listener, the curious passer-by, and anyone joining us for the first time. Come on your own, bring a friend, or arrive halfway through a Saturday errand. There is nothing to prepare and no need to know what you are looking for. Just choose a chair—or a spot nearby—and listen. We will keep the shop open, warm and unhurried around you. A story has a way of making a familiar room feel newly shared.

Make a Book to Keep

*I*n the afternoon, we will clear a little room at the table for making. Our binding workshop is a chance to slow down, fold paper, thread a needle and turn a handful of pages into a small book of your own. You do not need to know how to make one already; we will take it step by step, and there will be company while you work.

Binding workshop at 2 pm, twelve places. If you would like a place, please call us at Telephone (555) 014-2288. While the table is busy, the rest of the shop is still open for browsing, a good chat and finding the book that might send you home with another idea. Come to make, or come to look in; either way, there is room for an unhurried afternoon among books.

Twenty Years on Wren Street

For twenty years, we have been here for the ordinary, happy business of finding a book: the regular who knows exactly where to look, the neighbour calling in out of curiosity, and the newcomer who is not sure what they want yet. Over time, those small visits have made a community around the shelves.

World Book Day is part of that same welcome. You do not need a special reason to come in, nor a reading list ready in your pocket. Come to browse, ask us what we have enjoyed lately, or simply take a quiet turn among the books. Bring someone, if you like. We hope your first visit feels easy—and that the next one does too.

Stay for the Open Evening

*I*f the morning is already spoken for, or the afternoon slips by, come in later. As World Book Day winds down, we will keep the shop open for anyone who fancies a little time among the shelves. There is no programme to catch up with and no need to have joined us earlier: just step inside, have a browse and settle in.

Bring a friend, a partner, your family—or come on your own and find a neighbour to talk with. Tell us what you are reading, ask what we have enjoyed lately, or simply enjoy the companionable hush and bustle of a bookshop at the end of a good day. Make a whole Saturday of it if you like; otherwise, let the evening be your easy way in.

Find Us and Join Us

Whether you can spare a morning story, an afternoon of making, or a quiet browse later on, we would be glad to see you. For the workshop, please telephone us—there are only twelve places. Otherwise, simply come in, bring someone if you like, and let the day unfold among the shelves.
